Select the cell where the answer will appear. For example, the function = average (B1: B9) will calculate the average number of values in the range of C/Elles B1: B9. The function will be calculated, and the result will appear in the cell. This function contains a single argument. For example, the function = sum (A1: A3, C1: C2, E1) will add the values of all cells in all three arguments. Like most functions, Vlookup works in the same way in Excel and Google Sheets. To create a function manually: If you already know the name of the function, you can easily write it. Dishterpy! Open our example file. / En / GoogleSPreatements / Types of cell references / content / introduction A function is a predefined chemula that performs calculations using specific values in a particular order. Excel includes many common features that can be used to quickly find the amount, the average, counting, maximum value and minimum value for a range of cells. To access the list of functions: Click on the Functions button and select more functions ... This window appears when the first paralyte is written and remains visible as the arguments are written. Enter the range of cells for the argument within the parlets. If you feel comfortable with the basic functions, you may want to try an advanced as vlookup. Each function has a specific order, called syntax, which must be followed so that the function is calculated correctly. Click on the Functions button, then select the desired function in the drop-down menu. In our example, we will write = average. When you write a function manually, google sheets also show a window that lists the specific arguments that needs The function. The answer will be displayed in the cell below the range. In our example, we will select D3: D12. The arguments contain the information that you want the formula to be calculated, as a range of cell references, from the drop-down menu. You can check our article on how to use Excel Vlookup function to get more information. Similar to entering a chemula, the order in which you enter a function in a cell is important. Look at the videos below to learn how to create functions. To use functions correctly, you must understand the different parts of a function and how to create arguments to calculate the values and the cellular references. Calculate the sum of the cells and then divide that value by the number of cells in the argument. Account: This function has the number of cells with numerical data in the argument. In our example, we will write (C3: C9). This formula will add the values of cells C3: C9, then divide that value by the total number of values in the range. Press the Enter key on your keyboard, and the answer appears. Create a Google Sheets function has a variety of available functions.
